Home Economist News Notes

By Bernice Reed, Home Economist
Wainwright, Alberta

Use of a vapor-barrier is the most effective means of preventing moisture from getting inside walls and ceilings. The barrier may be applied to the warm side of exterior walls or ceilings, it may be an integral part of the plaster-base or wallboard or it may be a membrane immediately back of the plaster-base or wallboard.

Several types of vapor-registing membranes are: Duplex paper consisting of a continuous sheet of asphalt between two sheets of paper; Surface-coated and glazed asphalt-saturated building paper; Aluminium or other metal foil.

Ordinary asphalt saturated roofing paper and building papers are not good vapor-barriers as they permit passage of too much vapor.

To be effective a membrane must be continuous and unbroken to prevent passage of moist air. All joints must be lapped and securely fastened on studs, joists and bracing.

In applying vapor-barriers don't overlook:

Space under attic stairs.
Openings around light fixtures.
Openings in exterior or interior walls which connect with the attic space.

Cracks around attic doors.
Openings from stud space of interior partitions to the attic.

Some plaster-base and wallboard with barrier backing make satisfactory vapor seals for frame walls. The joints between these sheets of wallboard must be especially sealed to prevent moisture from passing through.

Vapor resistant paints and surface coatings prevent water vapor from entering the wall. Paints which are effective vapor-barriers include most aluminum, asphalt, lead, oil paints and varnishes. Water emulsion paints are not good barriers.

Membrane or attached vapor-barriers of known value are preferred to paints for new construction; paint or waterproof wall coatings are preferred for existing structures, as they are applied more easily and at less cost.

How Do You Conserve Soil?

The greatest extravagance of the people of Western Canada today is the needless waste of the country's land and water resources. Extravagance means living beyond one's means—and we have been doing exactly that with respect to our prairie topsoil. Unless we prevent this extravagance, which is reducing each year the productivity of millions of acres of fertile farm land, Western Canada will eventually become one of the "have-not" countries of the world. By proper land use we can, if we will, protect and conserve our soil.

Things That Can Be Done. Here are some of the things every farmer in Western Canada can do this year—no, not next year, this year—to conserve topsoil: (1) Use suitable, approved erosion-control practices to stop washing and blowing. (2) Stop excessive cultivation of land that washes or blows easily. (3) Use tillage, stubble-mulching (trash cover), and other cropping practices to protect the soil and save rainfall. (4) Hold the rain that falls on the land for the use of crops, grasses, trees, livestock, and for other purposes. (5) Use manure and fertilizer where needed, in the right amounts and at the right time. (6) Plant grasses or legumes on areas too steep or shallow to cultivate profitably. (7) Eliminate over-grazing when grass is thin and short by practicing controlled or rotational grazing. (8) Improve native pastures and planted grasslands through better management. (9) Plan and use a well-balanced cropping program, which includes grasses and legumes.

Saving the Soil. According to Dr. Hugh H. Bennett, the father of the soil conservation movement of the United States, these and other sound farming practices, which protect the land and increase production, are the real tools of soil conservation. Through their continual use prairie farmers can save their topsoil. Use these tools—encourage your neighbors to practice soil conservation measures in 1952.

Sports From Sea to Sea

All across Canada, sports-minded vacationers are casting a speculative eye to the future; because summer time is outdoor sports time. Plans are already in high gear at the Canadian Pacific's coast to coast string of hotels and summer resorts which offer the ultimate in fishing, swimming and boating in fresh water or salt, golfing on some of the country's most renowned fairways, and many other forms of recreation. This beautiful water-hole at Digby Pines in Nova Scotia (top left) is a challenge to par-buster and novice alike. Following clockwise is a view of swimming at Banff Springs Hotel in Alberta, where water sports are enjoyed against a mountain backdrop. Always a zestful game, tennis is really exhilarating in the crisp mountain air of the Canadian Rockies at Banff and Lake Louise. Although found right across Canada, trout in the Rockies will prove a stern test for the angler, as well as a proud trophy, as the beautiful fisherman seems to be telling the Mountie.

Florence Nightingale Red Cross Founder

The birthday of Florence Nightingale, founder of the nursing profession as it is known today, and one of the most extraordinary Englishwomen in history, is marked May 12.

Not only is Miss Nightingale known for her own works, but for the work she inspired, the Red Cross. In 1872, after the Franco-Prussian war, Henri Dunant visited London to read a paper on the work of the Red Cross. His first words were as follows:

"Though I am known as the founder of the Red Cross and the originator of the Convention of Geneva, it is to an Englishwoman that all the honor of that Convention is due. What inspired me... was the work of Miss Florence Nightingale in the Crimea."

Much of what today is considered good basic Red Cross program originated in the brain of this remarkable woman whose actual association with the Red Cross was limited.

In her memory, the International Red Cross marks the Florence Nightingale medal, the world's highest honor conferred upon a nurse.

The Crimean War gave Miss Nightingale her great opportunity to win world-wide fame. While the British soldier fought with great heroism, he was the victim of official neglect. Because of red tape, stupidity and callousness, British soldiers died by the thousands from "dysentery, scurvy, starvation and exposure." Life in and around barracks was indescribably revolting, and hospital life was even more dismal because the sick and wounded were robbed of a fair chance of recovery. During her two years in the Crimea, 1854-56, Miss Nightingale suffered "Petty jealousies, treacheries and misrepresentations." Her enemies were not only surgeons and politicians, both civil and military, but most of the nurses she had brought from England.

But the soldiers worshipped her. She could make them stop drinking, give up bad language, write home to their wives and submit to pain... "She would speak to one and nod and smile to as many more... we could kiss her shadow as it fell and lay our heads on the pillow along content."

Miss Nightingale emerged from the Crimea as an heroine to begin a life for the betterment of the nurse and the soldier. Indeed, Miss Nightingale had stamped the pro-

More Research Work is Needed

Many keen thinkers today are alarmed about the growing lack of sufficient food for the ever-expanding populations of the world. Different students of the question propose different remedies. (Some of these will be examined in future articles.) Dr. Jose de Castro, Chairman of the Executive Council of the F.A.O. United Nations, believes that much more food could be produced if the same amount of research into biological problems that affect agriculture were made as is being done with industrial research. Dr. de Castro tells us that one British Chemical Firm alone—the Imperial Chemical Industries—employs more scientists and technicians to work out new advances in chemistry than the total number of research scientists engaged in agricultural biology in the whole of the British Empire. Dr. de Castro suggests that if more and better paid scientists were available to agriculture we could look forward to the same astonishing new advances and inventions in crop and food production as are being made in the physical, chemical and electrical sciences. All this, if attained would help materially to raise the level of living of the two thirds of the people in the world who now suffer from sheer hunger and from severe malnutrition. So the cause of peace would be furthered.

"QUARANTINE CARS" BANNED IN PARKS

OTTAWA—Trucks and other vehicles and materials from the south Saskatchewan quarantine area will be banned from national parks in western Canada to prevent the possible spread of foot-and-mouth disease, James Smart, director of national parks, said Saturday.

He said the move is being taken to prevent the possible spread of the disease to wild animals in the parks. The ban will apply to all possible mechanical carriers of the virus, but at the moment will not include humans, Mr. Smart added.

The question of barring humans from the quarantine area from the parks had been considered, but no final decision has been made. There appeared to be "too many" difficulties in the way of enforcing such a restriction.

Statement Re:
PRICE SUPPORT ON LIVESTOCK

(We submit this prepared article for the benefit of livestock producers.)

As recently announced in Parliament, the Federal Government has agreed to establish a floor price on cattle until the United States embargo on Canadian cattle and beef shipments is removed. This price, until July, will be on the basis of $25.00 per hundredweight for good steers at Toronto, Montreal and Moncton, $23.35 at Winnipeg, $22.80 at Saskatoon, $22.55 at Edmonton and Calgary, and $23.40 at Vancouver. At the beginning of June a floor price for the month of July will be announced, and at the beginning of each month thereafter the floor price for the next month will be announced in order that the producer may know what the floor price on his cattle will be for the next two months.

In 1951 Canada exported about 400,000 head of cattle either as cattle or beef, for which no outside market is at present available although it is hoped that domestic consumption will increase with the lower consumer price for beef. If the market is over supplied, it means the price to producers will remain at the floor. With the fixing of a floor price, it will be possible for the producer to market his cattle in an orderly manner with only finished cattle reaching the market, and if this is done the producer may expect to continue to sell all his cattle without undue market gluts and may, from time to time, receive prices higher than the floor.

There are various reasons why it will be in the best interest of the cattle industry to delay the marketing of cattle while the United States embargo is still in effect, and attention is drawn specifically to the following:

1. When the American embargo is lifted, that market will again be available.
2. Orderly marketing will relieve market congestion and undue pressure on prices received by farmers.
3. The establishment of a floor price means the producer will always be in a position to obtain a minimum price for the particular grade of animals which he has to market until such time as the United States embargo is lifted. It is possible that the extra feeding, with the resulting weight gain, may "improve" the grade and therefore increase returns to the producer.
4. During the pasture season, cattle make their most economical gains on grass and this is available on most farms and also in community pastures in Western Canada.
